Wellness drives economic growth

The Global Wellness Institute (GWI) has released a white paper – Opportunities and Impacts of the Wellness Economy for Regional Development – to guide policymakers, researchers and business people.

Researched and written by GWI senior fellows, Ophelia Yeung and Katherine Johnston, the paper explores the wellness industry’s potential to fuel regional development and economic growth at all levels – locally, nationally and internationally – and the opportunities this would create.

"The wellness economy’s growth has been largely a private sector phenomenon and off the radar of most government leaders, policymakers and economic developers," explained Yeung.

Johnston added: "It’s time governments around the world started paying attention to this crucial sector. The wellness industry enables economic development, competitiveness and growth.

"It has implications for health, urban planning, environmental and cultural sustainability, workforce equity and diversity, social and cultural affairs, and much more”.

Arianna Huffington’s Thrive acquires AI specialist Boundless Mind

Thrive Global, the wellness and behaviour change tech firm founded by Arianna Huffington, has acquired neuroscience-based AI company Boundless Mind.

Boundless specialises in behavioural design and engineering. Its technology fuses neuroscience and artificial intelligence to optimise, personalise and target recommendations to users and to inspire positive change.

The technology has been used effectively to improve outcomes for products in categories spanning health, fitness, productivity, finance and e-commerce.

Huffington said the deal would allow Thrive to further develop its platform to “end the stress and burnout epidemic”.

“This acquisition is an exciting milestone for Thrive Global,” Huffington said.

Since our founding in 2016, we have been committed to cracking the code on behaviour change to help individuals and organizations end the stress and burnout epidemic and unlock their full potential.

“It’s more important than ever that we leverage the latest technology to help people build healthy habits.

“Boundless Mind shares our mission to create a world where everyone can thrive at a time when preventable, lifestyle-related diseases account for 75 per cent of healthcare costs and mental health problems are escalating, the only way to change health outcomes is to shift human behaviour.”

Sangha appoints former Aman executive John Reed as chief operating officer

Sangha Retreat by Octave has appointed John Reed as chief operating officer.

Originally from the US, Reed spent 25 years with luxury hotel group Aman Resorts in Asia, gaining insights into the markets of Southern Asia and Indochina.

With more than 35 years of industry experience, Reed, a graduate of Cornell’s School of Hotel Administration at the Cornell University in New York, US, has worked across three continents – in the US, Australia, Thailand, Myanmar, Bali and Bhutan.

Fred Tsao, chair and founder of the Octave Institute, said: “John is in charge of business performance at the Octave Institute.

“He will be developing a sales-driven culture throughout the organisation and leading the team to the next level.”

Octave’s Jamie Waring, managing director of wellness and Eddy Ram, managing director of hospitality, village operations and The Living Room in Shanghai will report to Reed.

The Octave Living philosophy brings together Eastern wisdom and Western science and aims to offer guests “lasting transformation”.

Mia Kyricos, senior vice president and global head of wellbeing for Hyatt Hotels, was presented with the Leading Woman in Wellness award at the Global Wellness Summit in Singapore in October.

Kyricos, who has a long and distinguished career in the spa industry, joined Hyatt last year, and has been a champion of bringing wellness to everyday life for guests at Hyatt’s 750 properties worldwide – as well as the hotel giant’s 110,000 employees.

During her time with Hyatt, she has established an annual ‘Day of Gratitude’ at Hyatt Hotels, where guests and employees are provided a customised ‘Gratitude Gram’ postcard to send to someone for whom they are grateful, with Hyatt covering the postage.

Delegates at the Summit, which was held at the Grand Hyatt Singapore, were also each given a ‘Gratitude Gram’ postcard.

Before Hyatt, Kyricos served as CEO of Kyricos & Associates, a boutique advisory firm providing guidance to wellness-driven hospitality, tourism and healthy lifestyle companies.
Workforce trends specialist Seth Mattison to deliver keynote at first ISPA Talent Symposium

The International Spa Association (ISPA) has announced Seth Mattison, an international expert on workforce trends and strategy, as its keynote speaker at the ISPA Talent Symposium which is taking place on 15 April 2020.

The event will be held at the Ritz-Carlton Bacara in Santa Barbara, California and will focus solely on work power issues. This is the first time ISPA has run this type of event. Mattison is co-founder and chief movement officer of Luminate Labs, a digital media platform and global community of leaders and influencers “igniting powerful change in the way people work, lead, live, and love”.

The new event will highlight innovative approaches to solving workforce challenges. Lynne McNees, ISPA president said: “Engaging teams is key to attracting and retaining employees”.

In his keynote speech, Mattison will provide insights into how to harness the power of top talent, tap into an organisation’s brainpower and learn how to adapt proactively to changes in the workplace. “Seth Mattison is perfect for our inaugural Talent Symposium as he will empower our attendees to establish a system to nurture and harvest the best ideas”, said McNees.

Sandy Fuhr elected as CIDESCO president as new board appointments revealed

CIDESCO International, the standards setter for the global spa and beauty industries, has announced that Sandy Fuhr has been elected as its new president.

Fuhr, who hails from South Africa, replaces Anna-Cari Gund who has held the post for the past seven years.

Fuhr has served as CIDESCO’s PR board member since 2011 and has worked in the beauty industry for more than 30 years. She is the founder of the Sandy Roy Beauty Therapy Institute, which has 12 beauty and nail training colleges and previously managed 16 beauty salons in South Africa.

Fuhr said: “Becoming president of CIDESCO is an honour and a privilege. CIDESCO represents the most incredible professionals in the beauty and spa industry from all around the world who work tirelessly to maintain standards and educate new generations. “I couldn’t be more proud to be part of such an inspirational organisation and I am looking forward to supporting the further growth of CIDESCO worldwide.”

Fuhr’s appointment was announced at the 67th CIDESCO World Congress General Assembly, which took place in Chicago at the end of September. Her election was announced alongside two other CIDESCO board appointments; Laura Grazioi was named sales and marketing director and Gerard Gordon as executive director.

Adeela Crown announces residency at The Dorchester

Adeela Crown, a facialist and skincare specialist, has announced a new partnership with The Dorchester Collection that will include a residency at The Dorchester Spa in the group’s iconic London hotel.

For the residency, Crown, who specialises in non-surgical skincare, has developed a range of high-performance facial rituals exclusive to The Dorchester.

The range, designed to complement the spa’s existing treatment menu, consists of four facials: Skincredible, Supersculpt, Crowning Glowry and No Derma Drama.

Lasting between 75- and 90-minutes, the facials feature a range of Crown’s non-invasive techniques including micro-needling therapy, resurfacing enzymes and microcurrent radiofrequency hybrid treatments, as well as her trademarked Skindance method.

Skindance is designed to lift and tighten the face and re-energise, sculpt, contour and oxygenate the skin, as well as boost lymphatic drainage.

Crown said: “Our collaboration is a perfect marriage of elevated luxury with superior skincare.”

Kelly Styles began her career as a salon therapist before taking a spa therapist role with Hand Picked Hotels at Brandshatch Place Hotel and Spa. She has been working at the hotel since 2013 and now serves as the spa manager.

Tell us about your career. How has it progressed?
“I’ve had a passion for beauty since I was really young and knew that it was something I wanted to do once I left school. I studied beauty therapy at college and after graduating in 2010 I took a casual therapist position at a salon. I worked there for three years before taking a similar role at Brandshatch Place. I had always wanted to work in a spa and after six months as a casual therapist I was contracted to work part-time, and then full-time hours. In early 2015, I applied for and got the role as spa supervisor, before being promoted again to the role of spa manager in March 2017. As the spa manager I oversee the day-to-day running of the spa and am responsible for a team of 10. I’ve had some great opportunities with the company and am still progressing. I’m currently studying for my Level 5 operational management diploma with Hand Picked Hotels and am due to complete it next year.”

What is your favourite part of the job?
“The thing I love most about my job is knowing the impact we can have on someone’s day. Making guests feel special and helping them to relax, even if its only for a couple of hours, is very rewarding for me.”

What advice would you give to people coming in to the industry?
“If you have passion for the industry you will go far. The beauty industry isn’t like a lot of people assume. There’s a misconception that being a therapist is an easy job, but there’s a lot more to it than people think. It’s can very strenuous, both mentally and physically, especially when performing multiple massages a day. I think it’s important to always have a goal in mind, and keep going until you achieve it. Be passionate and set yourself objectives, as this will keep you moving forwards.”

What are your goals?
“To continue the success of the spa and to help my team develop. I believe it’s important for all therapists to gain as much knowledge and experience as they need to achieve their goals.”

Blum Center offers brain optimisation scheme

New York’s Blum Center for Health, a functional health facility, is offering a personalised, non-invasive, neuro-enhancement programme.

Provided by Field, the FDA-approved American neuro-technology company, the programme has the potential to optimise clients’ brain function and performance which could stimulate symptom resolution for stress and anxiety, depression, PTSD, ADHD, and post-concussive trauma.

Devon White, CEO and co-founder of Field said: “It’s very exciting that our platform will attract a new market to the centre as more people look for technology-based brain optimization, seeking to better understand their brain’s activity and actualize its potential.”

Initial treatments, priced at US$795 (€707, £635) begin with a 90-minute in-depth analysis of the client’s brain and a ‘Know Yourself Better Report’. The report uses EEG tests to break down what each individual’s pattern of brain firing means. This guides and informs Field on what further treatments to suggest to participants.

Field is currently in the process of its second round of investment and expects to produce new unique dedicated Field Wellness Centers.

‘Nap-focused’ hotel to improve traveller wellness

Airport hotel operator Aerotel has opened a short-stay, nap-focused hotel at London’s Heathrow Terminal 3.

The new property has been designed for the convenience and comfort of late-night and early morning travellers.

The hotel was designed by Aerotel’s in-house team in partnership with KCA to maximise rest. Rooms are soundproofed, have warm, soothing lighting and mattresses and pillows that have been selected to encourage quality sleep.

Single, double and family rooms are available, with power showers and other amenities fitted.

"Our international guests are asking for a comfortable space to sleep when they land early or late at night, while London residents taking morning and late-night flights are looking for a spot to chill or power nap before boarding," said Song Hoi-see, founder and CEO of Aerotel’s parent company Plaza Premium Group.
ISPA study: cannabidiol is "industry’s next big thing"

Nearly half (43 per cent) of the respondents to ISPA’s 2019 US Spa Industry Study feel cannabidiol (CBD) products and treatments will be the industry’s next big thing.

CBD is an active but non-psychoactive compound derived from the hemp plant which has taken the spa industry by storm in recent years. It is used to treat stress and anxiety, insomnia, inflammation and chronic pain.

US spas are continuing to retail CBD products and also incorporate it into treatments, with the 2019 report stating that 86 per cent of facilities already using CBD oil have incorporated it into massages.

The ISPA study – carried out in collaboration with PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) – revealed that a majority of US spas, 56 per cent, plan to add CBD offerings in the next two years.

If realised, those plans would bring the proportion of spas with CBD offerings up from 18 per cent to 74 per cent by 2022.

Indian plaza turned into boutique spa hotel

Design studio Salient has converted a 1990s development called Swabhumi Plaza into a boutique hotel in Kolkata, West Bengal.

The plaza was built to celebrate the heritage of Bengal through performance, food and culture.

The new Swabhumi Raajkutir hotel has been designed in the style of a pre-independence, 19th century Bengali home to transport guests back to the Bengali Renaissance.

The design theme for the property is based on a fictitious story of ‘Kaliprasanna Singha’ who defended his home from British soldiers.

Owned by the Ambuja Neotia Group, the five-star, 33-room property has ornate interiors, wrought iron verandahs and courtyards with fountains.

Facilities include a spa and wellness centre and an events and convention space that can accommodate up to 2,200 guests for weddings, conferences and festivals.

Speaking to Spa Opportunities, Salient’s design principal Vivek Singh Rathore said: “The design of the Swabhumi Raajkutir responds to the existing building shells, while celebrating the legacy of Kolkata and Bengali craftsmanship.”

Six Senses adds fourth lodge to Bhutan site

Six Senses has opened its fourth Himalayan guest lodge in Bhutan, Six Senses Gangtey, named the “Traditional Bird Watching Bridge”.

This eight-suite lodge is part of a multi-location project – Six Senses Bhutan – composed of five satellite lodges designed to take guests on a journey through the Kingdom of Bhutan.

Six Senses already has three lodges in Bhutan, at Paro, Thimphu and Punakha, and are set to open their fifth lodge – Bumthang – in the Himalayas in March 2020.

The lodge is perched 3,000 meters above the Phobjikha valley, with a cantilevered bridge-like structure and floor-to-ceiling windows.

The Gangtey destination is home to a spa, with one single and double treatment room and two suites for swedana – an Ayurvedic treatment which uses herbal steam to release toxins from the body.

Subtle Energies, the Australian Ayurvedic aromatherapy brand, has been chosen as product house for the spa, which offers guests a range of massages and swedana treatments.

Every treatment begins with a ritual, where guests use a sodalite crystal to foster calmness and set positive intentions, while breathing and meditating. This is followed by Bhutanese chanting and singing bowls.

Each guest room has a private balcony with 180-degree panoramic views of the valley.

The UK Spa Association (UKSA) has announced a potential new partnership with the University of Derby, that will see the development of a new qualification.

Designed to increase the number of people entering the spa industry, the proposed diploma was announced at UKSA’s Summer Networking and Spa Directors Assembly, as part of its ‘Work for Wellness’ campaign.

It aims to foster an attitude shift, particularly among parents, teachers and career advisors, which UKSA has identified as one of the biggest potential barriers, towards the spa sector in order to attract new talent into the industry and improve workforce retention.

The diploma will aim to provide career development opportunities and raise professional standards, as well as create aspirational careers for those entering the industry.
Longevity creates wellness blend for Portuguese resort

Medical treatments and spa and wellness interventions are offered side by side at the new €25m Longevity Health and Wellness Hotel in Alvor, Portugal.

Developed by HPA Group and Longevity Wellness Worldwide, the 70-room resort has extensive facilities offering preventative and solution-based therapies, blending medical screening and diagnostics with wellness.

Options are based on five pillars: medicine that is preventive, personalised, holistic, integrative and regenerative. They include medical check-ups, fitness, anti-ageing, spa and wellbeing, stress management, mindfulness, detox and weight loss.

Nazir Sacoor, Longevity Wellness Worldwide CEO, said: "Our resort is aiming to be a world-class product with 360-degree solutions in health and wellness to meet all needs. "For us, Longevity is not just about living longer, but about living better".

The 16-room medispa offers integrative and regenerative-based medicine.

A nearby private hospital is used for most medical procedures and recovery.

Amatara Phuket announces six-day silent retreat

Amatara has announced it will run a six-day Mindfulness Silent Retreat in Phuket, Thailand, from 2-7 June 2020.

The retreat will focus on practical and theoretical aspects of meditation, using body and breath awareness training, yoga, and gentle stretching and movement sessions.

The retreat will be hosted by health and wellness coach Danica Toh, founder of Six Spac, a Singaporean self-awareness and mindfulness company.

Six Spac bases its coaching practices on the Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction programme, an eight-week programme which cultivates mindfulness and meditation techniques and was formulated to help people who experience physical and mental distress in their lives.

The retreat is designed to support long-lasting cognitive, emotional and behavioural changes and to foster peace of mind.

Participants will have the opportunity to visit the Amatara Spa, a 2,000sq m space which offers treatments and holistic wellbeing practices, including mud therapy, a Thai hammam, traditional Thai medicine and a range of western treatments.

Limited communication will be available for participants, however, as the majority of the retreat – including mealtimes – will be conducted in silence.

Almarose announces brand partnership with Elemis

Almarose Hotels and Resorts, a UK-based resort operator, has announced a new brand partnership with luxury skincare brand, Elemis.

The partnership will see the company provide treatments and products at 17 spas across the Almarose portfolio.

The Elemis properties will include the Hampshire Centre Court Hotel, Norton Park Hotel, Oulton Hall Leeds, Stratford Manor Hotel and Telford Golf and Spa Hotel.

Dave Heap, director of Leisure and Spa at Almarose, said: “We are currently in the middle of a very exciting time for our business, with the Elemis partnership aligning perfectly as we continue to invest in our spa product.

“The sheer variety of treatments, namely BIOTEC facials, that come with the Elemis brand is a huge factor in why we chose this particular partnership – we couldn’t be more pleased with the knowledge and support from the Elemis team.”

IHG partners with Spa Creators for Ana spa

A new day spa has opened at the Holiday Inn Winchester in Hampshire, UK.

The spa, called The Ana Spa, is a first for the hotel chain, which is owned by InterContinental Hotel Group (IHG) and operated by asset management firm Castlebridge Group.

Billed as a ‘luxurious deep relaxation space’, The Ana Spa was created by consultancy firm Spa Creators.

Facilities include five treatment rooms, including a couples’ room, equipped with treatment tables from Gharieni.

There is also a host of thermal experiences – including a four-person rasul, adjacent to the double treatment room and a vitality pool, equipped with bubble loungers.

Alistair Johnson, director of Spa Creators, told Spa Opportunities: “We wanted to create a space that would appeal to both hotel guests and day spa visitors.”

Illyria creates gourmet spa breaks at Hotel Mulini

Hotel Monte Mulini, a boutique hotel and spa in Rovinj, Croatia, has partnered with spa consultancy, Illyria Wellness, to create two new signature spa treatments.

Inspired by the region’s rich tradition of winemaking and gin distillation, the treatments consist of two massage rituals, called Wine Vault Full Body Rejuvenation and Gin and Tonic On The Rocks: Juniper Bundle and Stone Massage, and incorporate wine extracts and gin-inspired botanicals. Gregory Ugrin, director and co-owner of Illyria Wellness, said: “Signature Spa “Treatments are a powerful device often underutilized both in terms of their potential to reinforce a hospitality brand’s thematic strengths, as well as in terms of the opportunity to convert people who might not ordinarily order a spa service into a happy service buyer.

“We believe every spa and wellness centre can and should leverage truly bespoke spa services to advance the brand narrative.”

The recent Aufguss World Championships featured Don Quixote, suffragettes – and puppets which came to life

For the first time, a woman has been crowned top aufguss master in the world at the Aufguss World Championships, held in September at the newly built Spa Berendonck in The Netherlands.

Karolina Jarzabek of Poland, whose performance of ‘Magic Night – the story of the puppet who came to life once every 7,000 years,’ earned top honours in the single team category.

Poland also won in doubles, as Katarzyna Klajn and Lukasz Dluzniewki’s humour-filled interpretation of the Spanish masterpiece Don Quixote, inspired the international jury, as well as their professional waving skills.

HOT FUN

Aufguss is an entertaining, communal sauna ritual that – at its simplest – involves an aufguss master waving a towel to distribute the sauna’s heat, usually set to music and with essential oil fragrances adding to the experience.

But the top sauna masters can get very creative, weaving in storylines, costumes, and complex movements to enhance the experience.

More than 350 participants of the national qualifiers took part in the 7th annual Aufguss World Championships, and the final included almost 100 participants from 11 qualifying countries in a multi-day battle.

The world’s best 30 teams and 31 single Aufguss Shows were presented in the sauna for approximately 200 guests at the Wellness centre Thermen Berendonck, with a daily guests topping out at 1,200 people.

GLOBAL APPEAL
The five-day event gathered sweat enthusiasts from around the world, including representatives from the Japanese Sauna Association and Russia.

“It’s a celebration of getting the sauna and sweat family together to share what we all love the most: a wonderful löjly (sauna steam), and creating positive memories,” said Lasse Eriksen, development manager for Farris Bad in Norway, who is both a jury member and board member of Aufguss WM, which organises the event.

“There were many amazing shows shared inside the cabin, and definitely a lot of magic was created that participants, guests and the jury will carry within their hearts forever.”

Eriksen reports that the shows are constantly evolving, with mastery of the waving techniques growing and more creative and inspiring young MOAs (master of aufguss).

“We see more cultural connection by the increase of professional dancers, artists and actors becoming MOAs, and that makes the shows become as mindblowing and mesmerising as on any global stage of art – hot or cold,” he said.

The next Aufguss World Championships will take place from 7 to 13 September 2020 in Poland.
Recycling old textiles from the hospitality and spa industry isn’t a simple task, due to the quantity of textiles used.

Noel Asmar

Sustainable Garbs

Noel Asmar Group used the Global Wellness Summit to launch a new textile recycling initiative for hotels and spas.

Canadian uniform manufacturer Noel Asmar Group has launched a new sustainability initiative, Hospitality Lifecycle, a textile recycling programme for hotels and spas.

The initiative looks to provide hotels and spas access to practical, cost-effective solutions to safely and securely dispose of used uniforms, robes, towels, and sheets through global recycling experts. It will begin like Noel Asmar Group’s North American partner, Debrand.

The programme is tailored for both small and large properties, regardless of whom they purchase their textiles from, and end-to-end services are provided by Debrand on a cost-per-pound basis.

The move is motivated by the textile industry’s negative carbon footprint, and the vast amount of textiles that are sent to the landfill or incinerator each day.
“Gone are the days when you can dump product in landfills without environmental and financial costs.” said Noel Asmar, CEO of Noel Asmar Group.

Through the new programme, spas and hospitality companies can box and ship their products directly to Debrand, with no minimums or maximums. Debrand then weighs, processes and sorts the textiles, and also provides a monthly or quarterly report to the company.

Asmar said recycling old textiles from the hospitality and spa industry isn’t a simple task, due to the quantity of textiles used and the fact that many use mixed fibres in order to withstand repeat wear and washings. Items such as bare zippers, buttons and accessories also need to be removed, sorted and managed.

Asmar said she recognised the responsibility to find sustainable ways to manage her company’s own textile waste, including damaged apparel, fabric bolt-ends, and notions, and partnered with Debrand for an ‘out-of-the-box’ solution.

Throughout this process, Asmar began to ask properties what they were doing with their expired uniforms, and it soon became clear that most companies don’t have established policies for end-of-life textiles.

Asmar wanted to find a one-stop service provider for hotels and spas to manage their textile waste and partnered with Debrand to bring Hospitality Lifecycle to life within the US and Canada. She hopes to find similar partners in different regions around the world.

“With a knowledge of textile recycling capabilities and innovation, Debrand understands the challenges facing the apparel and textile industries,” said Asmar. “They want to extend the life of recycled goods and find creative ways to use the recycled product.”

The value of activity

A fresh Global Wellness Institute report has valued the physical activity sector at US$828bn

The physical activity economy is now a US$828bn (€752bn, £655bn) market – and its value is expected to grow further to US$1.1tn (€1tn, £870bn) by 2023.

The figure comes from a large-scale economic study by The Global Wellness Institute (GWI), published on 15 October.

In the report, called Move to be Well: The Global Economy of Physical Activity, the physical activity economy is described as incorporating fitness, sports, active recreation, equipment, apparel/footwear, technology and mindfulness activities.

Among its findings is that the global fitness industry is now worth US$109bn (€99bn, £86bn) – and that the sector continues to be “fast and furious” in its growth. The growth is attributed partly to the innovation...
within fitness and the sector’s ability to devise new approaches. The report lists the likes of HIIT and CrossFit as “recent additions” to the sector’s offer. Another finding is that the average “global participant” spends US$384 (€349, £304) yearly on fitness and gyms. “Health clubs, fitness centres and gyms have experienced tremendous global expansion over the last decade, with over 50 per cent growth in revenues from 2007-2018,” the report reads. “In 2017, GWI estimated that the fitness and mind-body sector was worth US$595bn.” When it comes to average spend on physical activity by person, North America (US$1,345) and Europe (US$528) lead the way, followed by the Middle East and North Africa (US$181) and Asia Pacific (US$171). Other findings include that, globally, the top 20 markets account for 86 per cent of all physical activity spending. Not all of the spend, however, is on getting physically active. “In many large markets, spending on apparel and shoe purchases can greatly exceed spending on actual physical activity participation, such as in the United States, France, Brazil, India, and South Africa,” the report states. “In other countries, such as South Korea, Australia, and the Netherlands, the opposite is the case. “The rate of participation in recreational physical activities varies widely among the top markets, ranging from a high of 84 per cent in Australia and Taiwan to a low of 15 per cent in India.”

"Globally, the top 20 markets account for 86 per cent of all physical activity spending"
How to Build the perfect water experience

A beautiful pool can be the standout feature that draws new customers. It can also cut your running costs if it’s designed to be sustainable. Mohammed Ibrahim, CEO of The Wellness, explains:

If it’s done well, the pool in a resort or a destination will become the ‘hero shot’ and it will give a standout commercial advantage. By clearly establishing the kind of experience we want to create.

“If it’s done well, the pool in a resort or a destination will become the ‘hero shot’ – one of the main images you want to see on your website – and it will give a standout commercial advantage.

“In the context of its location and constraints, every water element is different,” says Ibrahim, “We come up with a narrative for every single element and use storytelling to create something special for each customer. There’s a story linked to the local culture and heritage behind every project and it needs to be meaningful, so the project gains maturity from it.

“We love to work with dedicated operators,” he says, “Because they spend time getting this context right, so the projects evolve to be outstanding.”
Sustainability

“When it comes to sustainability, people are sometimes concerned it will cost more,” says Ibrahim, but this isn’t the case and we can provide a feasibility study showing investors how quickly they can get a return on their investment if they choose a sustainable solution.

“A typical example would show a return on investment within two to three years, after which time savings are made, which fully justifies the investment, as well as helping to save the planet.”

Ibrahim says market-leading operators are aware of the value to customers of swimming in natural clear water: “Having a chemical-free pool is an ideal way to avoid the disadvantages of normal chemical material. Low-quality chlorine products will affect pool tiles, pool equipment and users will have a bad experience because of smell and eye irritation.

“Salt chlorinator systems generate and dose free chlorine into pool water by an electrolysis process – you just need to add the right amount of salt to your pool and you will have safe water and will enjoy a long day in the pool without having red eyes,” says Ibrahim.

For example, the Al Faya Lodge by Mysk project, which was recently completed by The Wellness uses a new filtration system called OC-1, which is manufactured by Certikin. This saves 70 per cent of backwash water which leads to huge energy and chemical reductions.

Natural pools

Another alternative is a completely natural pool, explains Ibrahim: “For hundreds of years people enjoyed swimming in natural lakes and ponds where water gets cleaned by nature, without any chemical use.

“In a natural swimming pool – or bio pool – the water is purified and cleaned without any mechanical filtration or chemical use, after being fed through a regeneration zone, where it’s filtered through layers of gravel and aquatics plants.

“The regeneration zone provides a balanced ecosystem by breaking down harmful bacteria in water and converting them into nutrients for plant growth,” he explains. “Despite their higher capital cost when compared to normal pools, bio pools have much lower running costs.”

The Wellness recently completed a bio pool in Europe which is environmentally friendly and will deliver a great user experience.

“If you make wise decisions in terms of limiting what you build and make something beautiful, sustainable and which really adds a wow factor, then the whole project is running at a higher level and you’re going to save on investment, running and maintenance costs,” concludes Ibrahim.
