Danubius launches Ensana health spa brand

Danubius Hotels Group (DHG), one of Europe's largest health spa operators, has launched a brand for its health spa hotels.

Called Ensana Health Spa Hotels, the portfolio will consist of 26 rebranded DHG sites across Europe which treat millions of people a year and are famous for tapping into local/natural resources – from thermal bathing in Hungary to mud pools in Slovakia and salt baths in Romania.

The DHG brand will still be used for its 16 city hotels, while Ensana will focus on natural healing and modern medical expertise.

Ensana, derived from the Latin “mens sana” meaning “healthy mind”, was created in response to the worldwide growth in the wellness tourism market, worth a reported €580bn (£519bn, $640bn), and aims to meet the growing demand for natural health and wellbeing treatments and experiences.

Ishga phases out plastic packaging

Ishga, a luxury skincare brand specialising in organic seaweed products, has announced plans to completely phase out its plastic packaging, replacing it with sustainable alternatives in a bid to reduce the amount of plastic waste entering the oceans.

The brand, which is certified by the Soil Association in line with COSMOS standards, carried out a comprehensive review of its products, packaging and manufacturing processes in 2018, and is now implementing changes based on the results.

Canyon Ranch to open Redwood forest resort

Destination spa brand Canyon Ranch has opened reservations for stays beginning on 1 November for its newest brand extension, Canyon Ranch Wellness Retreat – Woodside. The company’s first retreat model sits among the Redwood forest in Woodside, California, near Silicon Valley.

The retreat includes 14 guest rooms in the main retreat lodge, encircled by 24 treehouses, and offers 16 acres of grounds designed for self-reflection with lawns and trails throughout.

"According to the Global Wellness Institute, people today spend an average of 90 percent of their time indoors. With Canyon Ranch Wellness Retreat – Woodside, we invite our guests to escape to nature and immerse themselves in the healing and restorative power of the ancient Redwoods," said Susan Docherty, Canyon Ranch CEO.

"The response to our new retreat model has been overwhelmingly positive with an increasing need among guests familiar with our brand as well as those new to Canyon Ranch, to reconnect and recharge."

Vegas hotel to focus on wellness

The Majestic Hotel, a new US$850m, 620ft tall Las Vegas hotel that will begin construction in May 2020, will feature a focus on health and wellness.

The brainchild of Las Vegas native and developer Lorenzo Doumani, The Majestic Hotel is slated for completion in early 2023, and will include a four-level, 70,000sq ft fitness, nutrition, and medi spa facility.

Serving as a state-of-the-art medical wellness destination, it will not only offer traditional body treatments and activities such as yoga and spinning, it will also have amenities such as personal nutritionists and comprehensive executive physicals.

Drawing inspiration from architect Paul Williams’ iconic La Concha design, which was built by the Doumani family in 1961, the Majestic Las Vegas is a contemporary structure by architect Paul Steelman with a design that is both futuristic and a throwback to the 1960s.

The five-star, non-gaming, 720-room, all-suite ultra-luxury resort will sit on the site formerly occupied by the Clarion Hotel, directly across from the site of the new Las Vegas Convention Center opening in 2021, and two blocks from the Las Vegas Strip.

“It is time for Las Vegas to provide a luxury option for those who visit our city who want something that is non-gaming,” said developer Doumani. “When one walks into Majestic Las Vegas, you can instantly sense that this is a very special place.”

CitySpa Cocoons opens 24-hour spa

Hotel spa consultant Peter Droessel has created a 24-hour wellness concept for Capella’s five-star Breidenbacher Hof hotel in Düsseldorf, in partnership with Dior.

The concept, CitySpa Cocoons, offers tailored treatments in noiseless circular cocoon treatment rooms to create a relaxing atmosphere.

Also on offer is a Forest Air treatment, using specialist breathing stations from Spiroyal. Droessel and his team of therapists will manage the spa on behalf of the hotel and will take reservations for treatments up until 11pm. After this, guests contact the spa’s hotline, which connects to a Cocoon holistic therapist.

Guests can also book treatments in advance and visit the hotel's gym 24 hours a day.

Therapists, known as corpiéres, are trained by Droessel. He told Spa Business: “Guests will benefit from the 24-hour concept, especially if they’re travelling from different time zones.”

Mayo Clinic unlocks ageing science

New science has revealed a potential solution to age-related diseases which works on a systemic basis, improving overall health and reducing the need to treat individual, age-related ailments.

A human trial in the field of senolytics – medicines which remove aged, toxic cells from our bodies – has found these treatments can decrease and potentially eliminate the presence of senescent cells in the body. These cells are responsible for fuelling age-related diseases, as they’ve ceased to divide and go on to accumulate in the body, eventually becoming harmful to the tissues around them.

Cells with senescent properties are linked to the occurrence of age-related diseases and have been found in the affected tissues of people with Alzheimer’s, pulmonary fibrosis and osteoarthritis. Senescent cells are also found in people suffering from obesity.

The trial, published by The Lancet in the EBioMedicine Journal on September 18th, was conducted at the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota.

During the study, nine subjects, aged between 50-80 years and receiving diabetes therapy, were administered with senolytic drugs for three days.

Scientists concluded that ‘interventions (in this instance, the administration of senolytic drugs) targeting fundamental ageing processes such as cellular senescence could delay, prevent, or alleviate multiple age-related diseases’ in humans.

Eco spa inspired by Finnish mysticism

This winter, an innovative new wellness concept – Arctic Elements Lakeside Spa – will open in Finland’s far north, with an ecological focus.

Due to open on 1 December 2019, the spa is located in Muonio, and sits on the shore of Lake Jeris, next to the Pallas-Ylläs National Park.

The new wellness centre is accessible to those staying at the Hotel Jeris, which has been newly renovated for winter 2019.

With strong eco credentials, the new spa uses electricity that is entirely renewable, taken from wind, water and solar sources, and geothermal heating generated by Lake Jeris and enhanced by extracting heat from shower water. The shower water itself is collected from a nearby natural spring.

With a concept based around Finnish mythology and folk tales, Arctic Elements Lakeside Spa will offer five different saunas, representing the elements found in traditional shamanic wellbeing rituals, with ancient Finnish gods named as the protectors of the saunas.

For Finns, the sauna is a place of relaxation, meditation and mental and physical cleanliness and, at Arctic Elements Lakeside Spa, it is where the four elements of earth, water, air and fire combine to create the fifth element – löyly, or sauna steam, the spirit of the sauna.

All five saunas, named after mythological Gods and Goddesses.

Mountaintop wellness hotel opens

The third phase of the Pingjiang Homey Wild Luxury Hotel in China has been built on top of a mountain overlooking the forest landscape that surrounds it and the other hotel buildings below.

Within the building, which was designed by Vague Edge, spacious bedrooms and living spaces look out across the surrounding mountainous terrain, while, at the other end of the site, guests can take in the views from a 122m (400ft) infinity pool.

The Dinghui building covers an area of 1,905 sq m (12,800sq ft), but was designed to fit the unusual site on which it is built. The structure is a 45m (148ft) long, narrow block that curves with the elongated shape of the mountain and the site level drops about 4.8m (15.7ft) from end-to-end. Dinghui is the part of the hotel to have been built.

W Hotels Debuts in Oman

Marriott International has opened its latest W Hotels in Oman, the second W to open in the Middle East this year.

The 279-bedroom W Muscat is set against the backdrop of the rugged Al Hajar Mountains, which form a stark contrast to the historic capital city’s lively waterfront.

All of the guestrooms and suites at W Muscat provide uninterrupted views of the ocean, with their design drawing inspiration from the ocean as well as the asymmetrical lines of the nearby mountains, caves and desert. The Escape’s Away Spa offers 10 treatment rooms, a steam room, a hammam and a couples’ treatment room.

The design is inspired by the ancient ritual of stargazing, where guests are enveloped under a bejeweled night sky with the intimacy of cave-like comfort. The spa also includes a Beauty Bar for touch-ups and ‘quick fix’ treatments.

A 1,800sq m beachfront pool offers views of the Gulf of Oman and forms part of the W brand’s WET experience. Here, guests can swim, soak up the sun and enjoy signature beverages while listening to live DJ performances. W Muscat will be hosting a FUEL Weekend in October – the W brand’s signature fitness and wellness retreat – where WET will take centre stage. The hotel’s FIT fitness centre boasts sea views and state-of-the-art equipment.

“Muscat is a fascinating and exciting city,” said Anthony Ingham, global brand leader, W Hotels Worldwide. “Its cultural DNA honours millennia of tradition while looking to what’s new and next – an ideal match for the W brand.

“The arrival of W Muscat – which reinterprets Omani design – marks a new chapter for the brand and this buzzing metropolis.”

Jean-Guy de Gabriac creates “anniversary massage”

Italian wellness equipment manufacturer Lemi has partnered with spa industry veteran and Tip Touch International CEO Jean-Guy de Gabriac to develop a new massage treatment to commemorate the brand’s 30th anniversary.

Inspired by the ocean, the treatment, called Ocean Dream Massage, is designed to be performed on Lemi’s Spa Dreams table, which features heated water cushions that make users feel weightless.

The movements of the massage, inspired by the flow of waves, combined with the peaceful ebb and flow of the water beneath, provides a tactile experience for the client, while the heat relaxes muscles, relieves pain and eases tension, and the movement of the water soothes the mind, and the cushions gently cradle the body.

GREEN SPA NETWORK (GSN), a nonprofit trade association serving the spa industry in support of a sustainable future, has created a Pledge for the Planet campaign to encourage the wellness industry to commit to eight principles of environmental sustainability by Earth Day 2020.

The United Nations convened a Climate Action Summit on 23 September 2019, with concrete and realistic plans to accelerate action to implement the Paris Agreement. As part of that effort the UN called upon all to take action to tackle climate change.

GSN is doing its bit with the Pledge for the Planet campaign – an eight-point plan created in an effort to remain responsive to the developments and apply “best environmental practices” in ways that will make a difference for the wellness industry.

The pledges include limiting plastics, reducing water usage, recycling, switching to alternative energy, planting trees, choosing organic food and products, reducing meat and dairy consumption, and sharing education and resources.

Canyon Ranch’s new Redwood resort

‘At our new Woodside resort, we’ve answered the customers’ needs to reconnect and recharge with activities like hiking and biking through trails canopied by the forest, an outdoor obstacle course and serene spaces for reflective moments,’ said Susan Docherty, Canyon Ranch CEO.

The 16-acre retreat property, formerly Skyonda Lodge, has been redesigned by Cole Martinez Curtis & Associates. The new aesthetic will embrace the surrounding natural beauty and create connectivity with the outdoors throughout each space, with an aim to develop a deeper sense of place.

The property features inviting guest rooms, an indoor/outdoor training zone, a boutique spa, sauna, an indoor saline pool and whirlpool, and plenty of opportunities to enjoy the surrounding beauty from the expansive wraparound decks, labyrinth and grounds. Immersed among the towering Redwoods, with private decks nestled in the forest, luxury treehouses are elevated on stilts so both guest rooms ‘retreat to nature’.

The scenic property combines intimate sizes and singular natural settings with multi-day, intentions-based programmes. It has the core belief that uniting like-minded people together around specific goals and guiding them with science-backed programming is a recipe for true change in participants’ lives. Is Victoria Beckham entering wellness?

Fashion designer Victoria Beckham has indicated she may move into the wellness market, potentially mounting a challenge to Kourtney Kardashian’s Poosh and Gwyneth Paltrow’s Goop.

Beckham launched a new make-up brand, Victoria Beckham Beauty, recently, and hinted there is more to come, saying: ‘I talk a lot about my lifestyle, the vitamins I take and about the working out, so that’s what’s next – wellness. It’s not about skincare that makes you look younger, it’s about being the best version of yourself’.

Victoria Beckham Beauty was launched at London Fashion Week, with the strapline: ‘a clean beauty movement for a life in motion’.
